

LUDOVICA ANDREONI

JEWELLERY

L.A. Jewellery

The passion for jems and jewelry she had since she was a young girl has transformed this inclination into Ludovica Andreoni's day job. She is now the designer of the L.A. signature collections.

A piece of jewelry is always the result of an inspiration, of that special creative moment where the colors and the materials come together to create something unique, a one of a kind object. Therefore, L.A. jewels always have something distinctive either in the form or in the metals used, that can characterize the woman who wears them.

The goal is to create “tailor made” precious and sophisticated pieces of jewelry that are deliberately unassuming. This is why all the collections have a linear, but very feminine, design that can be easily worn.

All the collections have been exhibited throughout Italy and Europe and are currently in the Rome studio.

Manufacturing Process

Each piece of jewelry begins with the study of the individual gemstones, of their form and color to inspire a unique and extraordinary design.

Every jewel is created from exquisite materials.

The metals used are primarily white, yellow, pink or burnished gold, combined at times with enamels of all colors, or with precious stones ranging from diamonds in all colors (from the classic white to brown to black to yellow) to rubies, sapphires and emeralds. Not to mention semiprecious stones such as amethysts, garnet gems, coral and turquoises all set to create intense shades of color with a touch a sheer elegance.
